Andrew Freund
reported his son missing last Thursday.

The body of a 5-year-old boy who was reported missing from his Crystal Lake, Illinois, home last week was discovered buried in a shallow grave on Wednesday and his parents were arrested on murder charges, local police said.

The remains of Andrew "AJ" Freund were found in a nearby community, wrapped in plastic, based on information provided to investigators by his parents, Crystal Lake Deputy Police Chief Tom Kotlowski said in a statement posted on the department's Facebook page.

"To AJ's family, it is our hope that you may have some solace in knowing that AJ is no longer suffering and his killers have been brought to justice," Kotlowski said in the statement. "To AJ, we know you are at peace playing in heaven's playground and are happy you no longer have to suffer," he said.

The Chicago Sun-Times newspaper reported earlier this week that police had been concerned at least since September about living conditions in the home where AJ Freund lived with his parents and younger brother.

The paper said that according to police reports the home was cluttered, dirty and in disrepair, with broken windows and the overwhelming smell of feces. AJ's younger brother has been taken into protective custody, the Sun-Times reported.

The boy's father, Andrew Freund, reported him missing on Thursday morning, telling police that AJ was not in bed in the morning. Authorities launched an exhaustive search in and around Crystal Lake, about 45 miles northwest of Chicago, assisted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Police said they would conduct an autopsy on the body, which was found in a remote area of Woodstock, Illinois, about 20 miles northwest of Crystal Lake along a major highway. No cause of death was immediately released.

Television images showed forensic investigators working in a field in Woodstock, shielded by a white canopy.

Both parents, Andrew Freund and Joann Cunningham, were arrested on suspicion of first-degree murder, aggravated battery and failure to report a dead child. They were expected to appear for a bond hearing in the coming days.

An attorney for Cunningham could not be reached by Reuters for comment on Wednesday. It was not immediately clear if Andrew Freund had retained an attorney. REUTERS

White supremacist killer of James Byrd Jr. executed

2 A white supremacist convicted of killing James Byrd Jr. in 1998 by dragging the 49-year-old black man behind a truck in one of the most notorious hate crimes of modern times was executed in Texas on Wednesday. John William "Bill" King, 44, was put to death by lethal injection and pronounced dead at 7:08 p.m. at the state's death chamber in Huntsville, the Texas Department of Criminal Justice said in a statement. The department said King wrote a last statement that read: "Capital Punishment: Them without the capital get the punishment." King, along with Shawn Berry and Lawrence Brewer, was accused of kidnapping Byrd while he hitchhiked in Jasper, Texas, on June 7, 1998. Prosecutors said the men dragged him behind their 1982 Ford pickup truck for 3 miles before dumping his body in front of an African-American church. REUTERS

Ugandan singer, presidential hopeful, claims house arrest

3 A Ugandan pop singer and lawmaker seeking to challenge veteran President Yoweri Museveni at the next election said on Tuesday he had been placed under house arrest, as the U.S. government criticized what it called authorities' "heavy-handed" use of force against citizens. Police and military personnel used teargas and water cannons on Monday to disperse a large group of Bobi Wine's supporters as they gathered for a concert at a lakeside beach resort, footage from local NTV showed. Before the concert, Wine was removed by police from a vehicle near the beach, the footage showed. Wine said he was taken to his home in a northern suburb of the capital, Kampala. In a series of tweets on Tuesday the singer said he was blocked from leaving his home by security personnel, who had told him he was under house arrest. REUTERS

Leader of citizen border patrol attacked in jail

4 The leader of an armed group that spent two months detaining migrants at the U.S.-Mexico border, drawing condemnation from civil liberties advocates, was hospitalized after he was attacked in jail, his lawyer and authorities said. Larry Hopkins, 69, was in a hospital with broken ribs after being attacked on Tuesday at the Dona Ana County Detention Center in Las Cruces in southern New Mexico, his attorney, Kelly

O'Connell, said. The detention center confirmed on Wednesday that Hopkins, a federal detainee, was "the alleged victim" of a Tuesday night attack and that the incident was under investigation. "Hopkins was given medical attention for non-life-threatening injuries," county spokeswoman Kelly Jameson said in an email, adding that Hopkins had been transferred out of the jail under the direction of the U.S. Marshals Service. REUTERS

6 Injured in Midtown manhole explosions

Firefighters were among those hurt in the Flatiron District eruptions.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU

Five firefighters and one civilian were injured Wednesday after multiple manholes exploded and created what fire officials called “a small flash smoke explosion.”

According to FDNY Deputy Assistant Commissioner Michael Ajello, FDNY firefighters arrived on scene at East 32nd Street in the Flatiron District and found multiple smoking manholes.

oxide or anything that shouldn't be there,” Ajello said on @FDNY's Twitter account Wednesday afternoon.

The explosions happened on 32nd Street between Fifth and Madison avenues just before 10 a.m. Videos taken after the eruptions showed smoke billowing from the street as New York fire fighters responded to the site. Nearby buildings lost power after hearing the booms, according to ABC 7.

While examining the scene, a small flash smoke explosion broke out, injuring the firefighters and a civilian, Ajello said. They suffered non-life-threatening injuries, and were taken to local hospitals for treatment.

More than 100 firefighters responded to the 3-alarm fire, which was still burning underground by the afternoon, the Daily News reported. Fire officials did not say what caused the explosions.

At least one building on 32nd Street was evacuated due to concerns over high levels of carbon monoxide. Firefighters remained on scene until all the power was cut and buildings were deemed safe, Ajello said.

The explosions also caused street closures and traffic delays in the area.

“We began examining surrounding buildings for carbon monoxide or anything that shouldn't be there.”

NYC pilot program will limit private cars on 14th Street

The plan aims to address overcrowding and congestion ahead of the L train slowdown.

letters@metro.us

With just days until the so-called "L train slowdown" begins, Mayor Bill de Blasio has announced that the city will embark on an 18-month transit improvement program that will limit most private cars on 14th Street.

The Department of Transportation's pilot will also create permanent bike lane improvements on Grand Street in Brooklyn, as well as on 12th and 13th streets in Manhattan, and transit and truck priority lanes on 14th Street, preventing through-traffic from 3rd Avenue to 9th Avenue.

"We have an opportunity to try something new and really get bus riders moving on one of our busiest streets," de Blasio said in a press release Wednesday. "As we continue to address congestion across New York City, this is an experiment that, if successful, could provide us another tool to move buses faster and save people valuable time for the things that matter."

Buses, trucks and emergency vehicles will be able to use 14th Street between 3rd and 9th avenues. Intersections along 14th Street will be designed with new turn lanes to ensure that bus lanes will remain clear.

Intersections will also receive Vision Zero treatments, including painted curb extensions that enhance pedestrian safety.

New curbside regulations will prioritize short-term loading and passenger pickup activity. Local traffic will still be permitted to make pickups and drop-offs along the corridor and access garages, but cars will need to turn right at the next possible location. Left turns will not be allowed.

The MTA announced that prior to the implementation of Select Bus Service, M14 service will increase on nights and weekends starting this spring.

The city plans to make bike lanes along the Grand Street corridor in Brooklyn permanent. City offi-

"We have an opportunity to try something new and really get bus riders moving on one of our busiest streets."

Mayor de Blasio

cials said the DOT plans to modify the protected bike lanes on Waterbury Street and Vandervoort

Avenue to help accommodate businesses along that section of the corridor, and will also create permanently retaining bike lanes, which were first installed in 2018 along 12th and 13th streets in Greenwich Village.

Citywide, cyclist use of the nearly 3 miles of protected lanes over the winter has outpaced bike counts from last summer. The new lanes are now a part of the DOT's cross-town protected bicycle lane strategy, along with recently installed lanes on 26th and 29th streets in Manhattan. More bike lanes are coming to 52nd and 55th streets in Midtown, as are pedestrian-friendly roadway spaces along both University Place between West 13th and 14th streets, and Union Square West between West 14th and 17th streets.

A "shared-street" arrangement on University Place will also be implemented so that eastbound vehicles on 14th Street can turn right and proceed slowly through that block. The blocks of Union Square West would remain closed to general traffic.

Why Aren't Doctors Telling Knee Arthritis Sufferers About These Two Often Successful Treatments?

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

NYC -If you suffer with knee arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications. With minimal or no results

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis a lot of knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers. Patients travel from all over the state to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation - the good and the bad....

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee. In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid."

Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make synovial fluid-like compounds that... during viscosupplementation treatments... doctors precisely inject directly into the knee joint.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the procedure is slightly off, the formula will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at NYC Pain MD use advanced digital imaging so they visually guide the injection accurately into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that performing joint injections without imaging miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have had prior viscosupplementation without this special digital imaging without good results - this may be the exact reason why.

That's why NYC Pain MD even takes it one step further. They do not just use one form of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation "medicines" also come in several different formulas.

Just like all medications, some people respond better to one than another. While many doctors only use one formula, the experts at NYC Pain MD use several and great effort is taken to figure out what the best one is for you.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

#2 Radiofrequency Neurotomy

This treatment is called, "Radiofrequency Neurotomy." RF for short RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are known as "Genicular nerves."

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to the Genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, Genicular Neurotomy (GRF) is performed for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published November 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1, 4 and 12 weeks, respectively. No patient reported a post-procedure adverse event during the follow-up period. RF neurotomy of

Advanced Imaging Allows Doctors To Pin-Point Treatments And Relieve Knee Arthritis Pain

Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers? Research shows joint injections done without advanced imaging misses the joint about 30% of the time. Now doctors can put lubricating fluid directly into the arthritis joint that may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

Genicular nerves leads to significant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee OA pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication, physical rehab or viscosupplementation do not offer good enough results.

RF may be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

But - RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be debilitating and this procedure may be the only thing that helps and give you after surgery relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

NYC Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary knee arthritis screenings every month. These screenings are a way for knee arthritis sufferers to get their questions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NYC Pain MD. If you would like to schedule a screening, just call 877-380-8537.

The screenings fill up fast every month. This screening is no cost and there absolutely no obligation.

More good news: for qualified candidates, insurances and Medicare often cover these treatments.

Minorities, older adults boost Biden atop 2020 Dem field

Former Vice President Joe Biden, expected to declare his run for the White House on Thursday, leads in poll.

Former Vice President Joe Biden, expected to declare his run for the 2020 Democratic presidential nomination on Thursday, leads all other candidates in the race and draws his strongest levels of support from minorities and older adults, according to a new Reuters/Ipsos public opinion poll.

The April 17-23 poll released on Wednesday focused on the vote preferences of 2,237 Democrats and independents: the two groups that may select the Democratic nominee in most of the statewide contests ahead of the 2020 general election.

According to the poll, 24 percent would vote for Biden over 19 other declared and potential candidates.

Another 15 percent said they would support Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, who ran a competitive campaign for the Democratic nomination in 2016.

No other candidate received more than 7 percent of public support, and 21 percent said they "don't know" which candidate they would back in a primary.

The poll measures how potential voters feel right now. Many may change their minds as they become better acquainted with the candidates. It has a credibility interval, a measure of precision, of 2 percentage points for the combined group of Democrats and independents.

The statewide nominating contests will kick off in early February next year, led by Iowa.

Biden, 76, who has sought the Democratic presidential nomination twice before, remains widely popular since he left the White House in 2016 after two terms as vice president. The former longtime U.S. senator will announce he is seeking the Democratic nomination on Thursday, a source familiar with the plans said on Tuesday.

Sixty-three percent of all Americans say they have a "favorable" impression of Biden, including 88 percent of Democrats, 59 percent of independents and 39 percent of Republicans.

In comparison, 58 percent of Americans said they have a favorable view of Sanders and Pete Buttigieg, the 37-year-old mayor of South Bend, Indiana, whose upstart campaign has out-raised some of his more established rivals this year.

All three appear to have stronger bipartisan appeal than Republican President Donald Trump. According to the poll, 44 percent of all adults said they have a generally favorable view of Trump.

Thirty-two percent of adults who are 55 years old and older said they would vote for Biden over other candidates. And 30 percent of nonwhite adults, including about 4 in 10 African-Americans, said they would back Biden for the nomination.

How To Know If Hormonal Replacement Therapy Is Right For You.

When it comes to understanding hormones or how hormones affect our overall health, we often get confused or at times misguided with preconceived notions that our hormonal peak is only relevant to our daily lives at the peak of our youth and pubescent stage.

However, that limited notion is entirely outdated as more women and men are finding the need to understand and be in tune with their hormonal states to restore hormonal equilibrium for each important stage in life. Through years of study, both women and men alike experience a variety of menopausal symptoms (women) or andropause symptoms (men) that can include changes in fertility, aging, weight maintenance, sexual desire and function, dermatological influx, bone strength (Osteoporosis) and urological concerns.

To see that so many areas in your day to day health is dictated by something as simple as a hormonal deficiency poses the question that we at New York Medicine Doctors Center seek to ask and answer which is - What exactly is causing this deficiency? And most importantly, what can we do as a team working alongside our patient to integrate a treatment that is long lasting and realistic.

This is why we are committed to bringing our patients the most advanced time tested methods of hormonal optimization.

We believe not only in providing a safe environment for our patients to talk about uncomfortable issues but to also thoroughly assess for effective results. We provide the following methods and treatments to help restore your hormonal imbalances:

New York City tickets 12 people for defying measles vaccination order

According to NYC records, this is the worst outbreak of measles since 1991.

New York City has issued civil summonses to 12 people it said were not complying with a mandatory measles vaccination order as the number of recorded cases in the city's worst outbreak since 1991 rose to 390, according to data released on Wednesday.

The city's outbreak of the highly contagious and sometimes deadly virus began last October and has been largely confined to children in Orthodox Jewish communities in Brooklyn.

Two of the 61 additional cases confirmed since Thursday are in pregnant women, the city's health department said in a statement.

The health department took the unusual step earlier this month of issuing an emergency order requiring unvaccinated people in affected neighborhoods to get the measles, mumps and rubella (MMR) vaccine unless they could otherwise show they had immunity.

summons for defying the order must attend a hearing and face a fine of up to $1,000 if found to be noncompliant.

The outbreak in New York City is the largest of several nationwide, with 2019 on track to break the record for the most measles recorded in the United States in a year since the country declared the disease eliminated in 2000.

That declaration meant that the virus was no longer present year-round. Outbreaks still occur, typically when travelers bring the virus into the United States from countries where measles is still common.

Since Jan. 1, there have been 626 measles cases recorded in 22 states as of April 19, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention said this week. None of the cases have been fatal. The highest number of annual cases since 2000 was 667, recorded in 2014.

New York City's tally includes cases recorded in 2018 after the outbreak began in October.

About 72 percent of the U.S. cases so far this year have been in unvaccinated people, and 10 percent in people who have had at least one dose of the vaccine, with the remaining 18 percent among people whose vaccination status was unclear, CNN reported this week.

A vocal fringe of parents in the United States oppose vaccines, believing, contrary to scientific evidence, that ingredients in them can cause autism.

According to the CDC, the worst post-2000 measles outbreak was recorded in Amish communities in Ohio, affecting 383 people. The New York City outbreak now surpasses that, according to the city's data.

About 72 percent of the U.S. cases so far this year have been in unvaccinated people, and 10 percent in people who have had at least one dose of the vaccine, with the remaining 18 percent among people whose vaccination status was unclear.

A group of anonymous people who said they were parents of children living in the affected Brooklyn neighborhoods unsuccessfully sued the city last week, arguing that the vaccination order was unconstitutional. A judge upheld the city's order. REUTERS

Facebook set to receive up to $5 billion in fines

Facebook beat analysts' estimates for quarterly revenue on Wednesday, aided by growth in its Instagram business and a surge in advertising sales, while also setting aside up to $5 billion to cover anticipated official U.S. privacy penalties.

Shares of the company, which have surged almost 40 percent this year, were up nearly 5 percent in extended trading after it said ad sales jumped 26 percent to $14.91 billion in the first quarter, beating analysts' average estimate of $14.77 billion.

Monthly active users rose 8 percent to 2.38 billion, beating estimates of 2.37 billion, according to IBES data from Refinitiv.

Costs jumped 80.5 percent to $11.76 billion, as the company ramped up spending to improve content and security across its plat-

The company also raised the top end of its provision for losses related to Federal Trade Commission privacy concerns from $3 billion to between $3 billion and $5 billion.

But excluding items including the potential FTC penalty, the company earned $1.89 per share, better than analysts' expectations of $1.63 per share.

The FTC has been investigating revelations that Facebook inappropriately shared information belonging to 87 million of its users with the now-defunct British political consulting firm Cambridge Analytica.

The probe has focused on whether the data sharing of data and other privacy disputes violated a 2011 agreement with the FTC to safeguard users' privacy.

Total revenue rose 26 percent to $15.08 billion, beating analysts' average estimate of $14.98 billion.

Net income attributable to Facebook shareholders fell to $2.43 billion, or 85 cents per share, in the first quarter ended March 31, from $4.99 billion, or $1.69 per share, a year earlier. REUTERS

Learn futuristic skills in these summer courses for adults

Grow in your field, or take a new direction, with classes in data science, entrepreneurship, artificial intelligence and more.

They say that summer bodies are built in the winter; luckily for more of us, winter promotions and raises are often earned in the summer. You've probably heard a lot about how professional development and continuing education can enhance your bottom line. And that's never been truer than it is today, as technology changes hundreds of industries at mind-bending speed.

But don't just sit back and watch it happen. This summer, you can give yourself an advantage in your field, or even orchestrate a lucrative career change. These adult continuing-education courses will let you earn serious skills in some of today's most promising fields.

Data science

In the last few years, data science has emerged as a red-hot industry, with plenty of vacancies. "Demand for data scientists is off the charts," said LinkedIn's 2018 Workforce Report, which pointed to more than 150,000 openings nationwide. "Data science skills shortages are present in almost every large U.S. city." A 13-week summer immersive session at General Assembly — which has several locations and offers remote classes — will school you on the field. (If data isn't your jam, GA offers courses on more basic skills like coding, marketing, design and more.) Immersive session runs from June 3 to Aug. 27; price is $15,950. See generalassembly.ly for more information.

The new small

If you've been dreaming about being your own boss, this summer may be the time to strike (or at least prepare), while the economy continues to run hot. Capital is still free-flowing; Americans have disposable income to lavish on your product or service. The Boston Center for Adult Education has a range of six-week online courses just promoting yourself. The School of the New York Times offers a five-class, on-demand certificate course in Content Marketing, in which five Times experts show you how to promote your business or your clients by creating native advertising, otherwise known as online content and social media. Price: $1,450; seenytedu.com for more information.

3-D printing

In the manufacturing world, the future is 3-D. Starting May 20, MIT is hosting a 12-week online class on the fundamentals and potential of 3-D printing (a.k.a. additive manufacturing, or AM); an MIT professor and guest lecturers will explain how AM's ability to create products and parts on demand can revolutionize a number of businesses that rely on design. Price: $1,950; see [\[manufacturing.mit.edu\]\(http://manufacturing.mit.edu\) for more info.](http://additive-

<div data-bbox=)

Want to train in person? Artisan's Asylum in Boston also offers classes in 3-D printing and other modern manufacturing skills including laser cutting, screen printing and robotics. Class prices vary; see artisansasylum.com for more information.

Artificial intelligence (AI)

As artificial intelligence comes to more and more industries in the next few years, the robots are still going to need some human help (for a while, anyway). DeepLearning.AI's on-demand class "AI for Everyone" will help you learn what it's all about, and if you can be the genius who can create better jobs by adding AI to your business; reassuringly, that's what the experts say is the goal. See deeplearning.ai for more information.

Managing mental health while studying abroad this summer

Make sure you take care of yourself before your adventure.

PAT KING

With the weather getting warmer and the spring semester coming to a close, many college students are making their plans to fill up that two to three month void between academic years with summer sessions abroad. While these extra summer programs can help students gain needed credits or boost their overall GPAs, many students who suffer from seasonal depression during this time of year may need to take extra precautions before committing to a semester abroad.

Seasonal affective disorder (SAD) affects around 4 to 6 percent of the overall population, with the majority of those people feeling its effects during the colder months of the year. But according to WebMD, about 10 percent of those who suffer from SAD feel the inverse and their depression intensifies during the spring and summer.

This can be an unfortunate struggle to go through especially if you have committed to a summer semester that requires you not only to travel and to be alert during your studies, but also requires you to pay a lot of money upfront to reserve your place within this program.

In a worst case scenario, students do have the option to receive some sort of reimbursement from their school in the case that their mental health is not allowing them to focus on their studies properly. For example,

Hofstra University will refund up to 70% of a student's tuition in the case of a mental health withdrawal.

While different schools have different policies on reimbursing students, many schools prepare their faculties and students with information on how to spot and manage the effects of depression and anxiety while studying abroad. The University of South Florida has come up with some steps in a brochure they titled "Mental Health and Awareness Abroad" that can help students and faculty members to ease the stress of studying in a new country.

The steps include such helpful tips as journaling, routine exercise, familiarizing yourself with your new surroundings before and during your trip, limiting the amount of time you call home, getting a healthy amount of sleep, maintaining a good diet, relinquishing control over whether or not things will go as planned, realizing that you will feel stressed, angry, and depressed and that's okay, of course, not abusing drugs and alcohol during your time away, and many others.

If you are planning on traveling through a summer academic program, make sure to touch base with your school on their policies surrounding tuition reimbursement due to mental health issues for study abroad programs and request literature on how to manage it before it consumes your trip.

Fun summer classes for adults

Express yourself at these fun, creative courses throughout the Northeast.

MICHAEL MARTIN

One of the better things about modern adulting is that, these days, you're never too old to go to summer camp—whether your taste runs to continuing education, artistic exploration, or literal tent-related hijinks in your own personal remake of “Meatballs.” If you're looking to express yourself creatively or just indulge in childhood nostalgia, the Northeast offers no shortage of organized fun this season.

Summer film school

Become an auteur on your own time at the Massachusetts College of Art & Design, which offers a mini film school in the month of June. The course concentrates on documentary filmmaking, covering everything from shooting and editing to producing. Five courses from May 28 to June 27; price is $740 per course. See massart.edu for information.

In NYC, the New York Film Academy has two six-week documentary courses, which begin on May 6 and July 8, along with a ton of workshops in other genres—from screenwriting to game design and virtual reality—that last from one to eight weeks. Prices vary; see nyfa.edu for more information.

Adult summer camp

Summer camp for grown-ups has taken off big time in the last few years, promising all of the fun of childhood sleepaway camp and little or none of the trauma. (Although if you want to run your own underwear up a flagpole, we assume they won't stop you.) Camp No Counselors conducts one of the country's most popular iterations on a campsite about two hours from NYC and Philly, offering sports like Capture the Flag, arts and crafts and (naturally) a talent show. From May 30 to June 2 or Aug. 30 to Sept. 2. Prices range from $500-$600; see campnocounselors.com for more information.

Studio art

Summer classes for grown-up artists abound throughout the Northeast. Boston's Museum of Art offers information.

The Art Studio NY has classes like “Fear-Free Drawing” and drawing tutorials at the Metropolitan Museum of Art (theartstudio.com). And Philly's Fleisher Art Memorial offers several immersive summer workshops ranging in length from one night to four weeks (fleisher.org).

Writing classes

You can finally knock out your novel or get that short-story collection out of your brain and onto the page, with Grub Street's wide variety of writing workshops in Boston. Classes in personal essay or short-story writing spur you to create six pieces in six weekly evening sessions; intensive fiction workshops meet five days a week. Concentrations on memoir, young-adult fiction and outlining a novel are also offered. Classes start around mid-May; prices range from $350-$620. See grubstreet.org for more information.

Fine Arts offers a summer MFA program in studio art which accommodates all experience levels in a variety of class lengths. Starts May 9; see mfa.org.

Where is that gal?
Where did she go?
The tall, good-looking black-haired one,
Who exited the subway car with me.

I couldn't see her face,
But something in her form

I only wished to watch her glide

Or watching a comet

Evil in plain sight

Director Joe Berlinger gives Metro an inside look at his film on serial killer Ted Bundy.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

When you think of a serial killer, it's easy to imagine someone who is evil from the inside out. You see images of killers in court with a solemn look in their eyes, sinister grins and sometimes showing absolutely no remorse. Then you look at photos of Ted Bundy when he was on trial, and the man standing in front of the cameras does not exude any of these so-called "serial killer characteristics." On the contrary, Bundy was charming — he smiled, was well-spoken and seemed likable. Director and true-crime pioneer Joe Berlinger was intrigued by that very fact: How could someone with so much evil inside of them hide in plain sight?

Berlinger decided to delve into the world of Bundy and directed two pictures, the docuseries "Conversations With A Killer: The Ted Bundy Tapes" (available on Netflix now) and the feature-length film starring Zac Efron and Lily Collins, "Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil, and Vile." Both pictures are about Ted Bundy and his heinous crimes, but from very different viewpoints. "Conversations With A Killer" focuses on Bundy and his conversations with two journalists before his execution in 1989, whereas "Extremely Wicked" takes a closer look at Bundy's relationship with longtime girlfriend Elizabeth Kendall, née Kloeppfer. Berlinger wanted to focus on how Bundy was able to deceive so many people for so long, and why exactly this man was able to get away with murdering innocent victims.

"For me, Bundy defies all stereotypes of what we want to think a serial killer is," says Berlinger. "We want to think a serial killer is some dark and twisted social outcast who's repulsive-looking, because it gives us comfort that these people are easily identifiable in society, and therefore avoidable. I think Bundy teaches us the exact opposite. He was charming and good-looking and had lots of friends and people couldn't imagine that he was capable of doing these things, so he eluded capture for a long time. That's a very important lesson for people."

Berlinger was motivated to cast the spotlight on Bundy after finding out that some people had forgotten about the killer who pretended to be someone he wasn't so convincingly for so long. "I felt like it was time to remind people of a fundamental lesson that I had gleaned in my 25 years of true-crime filmmaking, which is [that] some people we least expect and sometimes trust the most are often capable of the worst evils."

Focusing on Elizabeth Kendall's point of view was paramount to make that lesson seen and heard. "The relationship with Kendall is what made the project interesting to me," says Berlinger. "I am interested in how a killer deceits [sic], how a killer can get away with a murder for so long, how a killer can lure victims to their death and how friends and acquaintances all around them missed all of the signs and clues. I think by seeing the movie through the perspective of somebody who loved and trusted him, we are able to portray that dynamic."

Bundy's looks certainly played a part in his ability to pull the wool over almost everyone's eyes, but his mind is the true puzzle. "I think he is a master manipulator and part of manipulation is convincing yourself. I think there were times that he convinced himself of his innocence, just like I think there are times when people do bad things and convince themselves otherwise. It's human nature to compartmentalize. It's hard to say but I think Bundy probably convinced himself of his innocence while also being highly manipulative and aware of his manipulation."

Another puzzle the film highlights is if a master manipulator and serial killer can even be capable of loving another human being. "I'm not smart enough to tell you if he really loved her. That's one of the questions the movie explores without answering, whether it was a cover for normalcy to get away with his crimes or it was a psychological need that he had for normalcy. Love is many things to many people so it's hard to define love. If by love you mean this selfless embrace of another person and allowing that other person to be their best, which is the classic definition of love, then probably not," says Berlinger.

Bundy and Kendall's relationship seems almost normal throughout the film. She never sees the heinous acts he commits and the audience never sees the heinous acts he commits, either — it's almost as though we are getting duped along with her. "You're going to see some incredible performances to the point of where you will suspend your knowledge through part of the movie that this is a movie about a serial killer. By the end of the film, you too may have a real sense as to what it's like to be deceived by a serial killer."

"Extremely Wicked, Shockingly Evil, and Vile" will drop on Netflix and premiere in select theaters on May 3.

Miller hits the stage at Irving Plaza this Sunday, April 28. MALCOLM JORIS

Escaping the real world

Singer-songwriter Jake Miller gave Metro the scoop on what to expect at his show this Sunday.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Singer-songwriter Jake Miller is hitting the stage in NYC this weekend, and the 26-year-old Florida native promises to produce an unforgettable feel-good show. Miller recently achieved massive success with his single "Wait for You" and also just signed with Sony Music, cementing his status as an up-and-coming music sensation.

Aside from the successes of his career, the "Nikes" singer really just wants to make music that impacts people in a positive way and provides an escape from the real world. Miller sat down with Metro to chat about his inspirations and give insight on what to expect at his show on April 28 at Irving Plaza (7 p.m.).

I noticed you write and produce your own songs. From where do you gather inspiration when you write?

I listen to every type of music, so I'm a big fan of anyone from Frank Sinatra to John Mayer to Pharrell. I think I kind of just take all of my music interests and put them all together and that's what creates my style. In terms of what I write about, I always just write about what I'm going through and real-life experiences. I think it's really important that I connect with my own music. That's the only way the world will connect with my music.

Your previous albums were independent, but you signed with Sony for your latest one. How has it been working with your new label?

It's been amazing. They've still given me all of the creative control so I still get to write and produce all of my own music, but using all of the resources of a major label. Just having them behind me makes it a lot easier for me. It's just really motivating and it inspires me. It makes me want to make even better music and deliver even more creative visuals and take everything to the next level knowing that I have a great team behind me working day in and out.

The single "Wait for You" from your latest album is obviously a hit. What is that song about?

It's really just about waiting for somebody that you love to make up their mind. You know that they're worth it so you're going to wait for them to go through whatever they are going through and you'll be waiting for them on the other side.

Do you have a favorite song from your latest album?

ARE YOU OR A LOVED ONE SUFFERING FROM MAJOR DEPRESSIVE DISORDER?

A research study is being conducted to evaluate an investigational product to be used for the treatment of Major Depressive Disorder (or MDD)

You or someone you care about may be eligible to participate if you meet the following criteria:

- Have a diagnosis of MDD
- Are between the ages of 18 and 65 years

Qualified participants will receive:

- Study-related care and exams at no charge
- Compensation for time and travel

I have a few, for different reasons. I love "Wait for You" just because of the success of it — it's really inspiring, and hearing it on the radio means everything to me. I also love the song "Nikes" and there's a song called "Skinny Dip" that's kind of like a country song, just really cool melodies and lyrics. It's very nostalgic.

How would you describe your music style to someone who has never heard your music before?

I would say positive, and there's just something in it that feels fun. It's uplifting and you can listen to it no matter what age you are, what ethnicity or what gender. I think everybody can listen to my music and just feel good. Same thing with my shows. You can come to my shows and it's just two hours where you can escape the crazy world and just enjoy good music and good vibes. That's everything that I strive for.

What are some of your hopes and goals for your career?

I just want to keep making music that makes people happy and positively impacts people. In terms of actual goals, I would love to have a platinum song, you know, have that one song that blows up and everybody knows it. I would love to win a Grammy one day. But as long as I can keep doing what I'm doing and gradually get bigger and bigger, have the fan base grow and the music gets better — that's all I can really ask for.

Overall, what can fans expect when they attend a concert of yours?

Just an amazing vibe. You can escape from all of your problems for a few hours and just escape from the real world. I'm onstage having the time of my life — definitely a cardio workout, jumping around, smiling and laughing. Just an all-around good time. Definitely a night that people won't regret.

TRAVEL

5 Travel rewards myths that could cost you

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Twenty-four years ago, I knew so little about travel rewards that I took an around-the-world trip without signing up for a single frequent traveler program. Those lost points and miles still haunt me.

Fast forward to last summer, when our family stayed two nights at a luxury hotel in Venice, Italy. Our room would have cost an eye-popping €1,500, or about $1,700, per night. Thanks to the points I'd accumulated using a travel rewards credit card, this over-the-top stay was free.

There's definitely a learning curve involved when it comes to travel rewards, but delaying your education can be costly if you love to travel. For example, many people misunderstand how much points are worth, either over- or underestimating how much free travel they can get, according to a recent NerdWallet survey.

People also make the mistake of carrying balances on those cards (the rewards won't make up for the high cost of paying interest), and far too many people earn rewards that they don't redeem, resulting in billions of dollars of potential value left untouched.

Don't let any of these myths prevent you from making the most of available travel rewards:

Myth 1: Travel rewards credit cards have high annual fees

Some travel rewards cards have no annual fee. Many charge somewhere in the neighborhood of $95 a year. Usually that fee can be offset by using the cards' perks: free checked bags for airline-branded cards, for example, or a free night's stay every year for hotel-branded cards. Even the high-end cards with annual fees of $450 and up typically offer airport lounge access, credits to offset travel fees, and higher rewards rates that can more than pay for the card if you're the right user.

Myth 2: Travel rewards are hard to redeem

Finding free or upgraded airline flights can be a challenge, especially for people who don't plan well ahead. The best time to book a rewards flight is typically 9 to 12 months in advance, when the airlines first make such seats available. (It also pays to check back frequently, since carriers also may add more awards seats depending on how the flights are filling up.)

Hotel rewards are easier to book since occupancy rates are generally lower. If you want even more flexibility, consider a general travel rewards card that allows you to redeem credits for travel purchases or to transfer your points to a variety of frequent traveler programs.

Myth 3: It's best to focus on one frequent traveler program

You may want to concentrate on earning rewards in a single frequent traveler program if you need a lot of points for a special trip. But that doesn't mean you should ignore other programs.

If you love to travel, it's unlikely you pricing, which means the value of rewards can vary. For example, one hotel chain could have lousy redemption options in a city, while another offers a much better deal.

Then there's the issue of devaluation.

Programs occasionally devalue their points and miles, meaning it takes more of them to earn the same reward. But they tend to do so at different times. If your rewards aren't concentrated in one frequent traveler program, you won't risk having them all devalued at once.

Myth 4: Travel rewards cards require excellent credit

Travel rewards cards typically require good credit, which is generally defined as a credit score of 690 and above on a 300-to-850 scale. Some require scores of 720 and above. If your scores aren't quite there yet, look for a card that offers cash-back rewards and use those for travel.

Myth 5: Travel rewards aren't worth the effort

Travel rewards programs aren't always intuitive, and some of us invest a fair amount of time trying to squeeze the absolute maximum value out of every point.

But you don't have to be an extreme rewards hacker to benefit. It doesn't take much effort to sign up for hotel or airline frequent traveler programs, or to use a general travel rewards credit card for the spending you were going to do anyway. Sign up for the programs' email newsletters, which can alert you to special deals.

Then make a point to start cashing in those rewards, and you may see what all the fuss is about.

Jets GM Mike Maccagnan could trade away his No. 3 pick during tonight's NFL Draft. GETTY IMAGES

Will the Jets hold onto No. 3 pick at 2019 NFL Draft?

Gang Green is taking calls on trading away their top-three selection.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Jets are reportedly looking to move out of the top-three of the 2019 NFL Draft tonight.

Per Connor Hughes of the Athletic, the Jets have been "fielding phone calls" to trade their No. 3 overall pick. The Washington Redskins have been linked with early talks, though Hughes added that this kind of move from the Jets is "normal."

New York's No. 3 pick provides an opportunity to pick up a premier pass rusher, whether that be Ohio State's Nick Bosa, Alabama's Quinnen Williams, or Kentucky's Josh Allen.

Bosa is expected to be a top-two pick and could go first-overall if the Arizona Cardinals decide not to pick Kyler Murray, a notion that seems to be picking up steam just hours before they go on the clock.

That could force the San Francisco 49ers to take Williams at No. 2, leaving the Jets with Allen or the likes of Houston's Ed Oliver or LSU linebacker Devin White.

If one of the Jets' desired prospects are not there at No. 3, expect the likelihood of them dealing the pick to exponentially increase.

The Redskins, who own the No. 15 pick of the draft, could be desperate for a quarterback after the gruesome injury suffered by Alex Smith last year.

While Washington's senior vice president Doug Williams has made it known that his team is more likely to trade down rather than up, the team's reported interest suggests that isn't the case.

Jumping up into the top-three would allow the Redskins to draft a young quarterback, whether that be Murray or Ohio State's Dwayne Haskins.

Second-tier quarterbacks in the draft — Missouri's Drew Lock and Duke's Daniel Jones — are projected to go between the 10-20 range in the first round.

However, ESPN's Dianna Russini reported on Wednesday morning that the Redskins are expecting to pick up Haskins at No. 15, which would be a steal considering this is a top-10 talent.

Other quarterback-needy teams though should be in the mix for the Jets' pick, which general manager Mike Maccagnan could use to acquire some more draft assets.

The Jets only have six picks this year and don't have one in the second round.

Given the defensive depth in the class of 2019, the Jets could pick up multiple draft picks for their No. 3 and address their edge-rushing needs as well as nabbing a cornerback with plenty of upsides.

Decision time for Giants on QB

The Giants GM is on the verge of picking the franchise's passer of the future.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

New York Giants general manager Dave Gettleman has to come away with a quarterback during the 2019 NFL Draft.

It doesn't matter how it happens, it just needs to get done.

Forget about last year and the selection of Saquon Barkley in a quarterback-heavy draft. Barkley was the NFL Offensive Rookie of the Year. He's going to be a generational running back.

It was the right pick and it will be verified further once the Giants come away with a quarterback in the next few days.

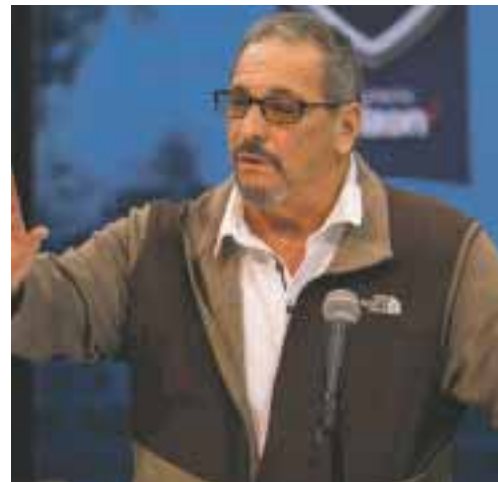

Now it depends on which one.

ESPN's Sal Paolantonio reported on Wednesday morning that the Giants are committed to picking up a passer during the draft, which is the obvious move considering Eli Manning is on his last legs and in the final year of his contract.

Most of the offseason has seen the Giants linked with Ohio State's Dwayne Haskins, considered by many to be the best quarterback available in the draft despite the prospect of Kyler Murray going first-overall to the Arizona Cardinals.

Haskins, a New Jersey native who continues to state his desire to play for the Giants, is coming off a monster sophomore season in Columbus where he threw for over 4,800 yards with 50 touchdowns compared to just eight interceptions.

However, links to Haskins have weakened in the last few weeks. With the No. 6 and 17 picks in the first round,

Giants GM Dave Gettleman. GETTY IMAGES

there is a chance the Giants draft a top defensive talent like Kentucky's Josh Allen or LSU's Devin White first. Then with the 17th pick, they'll pursue a quarterback whether that's Missouri's Drew Lock or Duke's Daniel Jones; the latter gaining steam as a legitimate option for the Giants.

Any sort of first-round-selection drama could be avoided though if the Giants opt to make a trade.

If the Cardinals take Murray at No. 1, second-year passer Josh Rosen will be shipped out of Arizona — a move that some believe is on the verge of being completed.

ESPN's Dianna Rusini reported on Wednesday morning that the Washington Redskins, who were reportedly in on the Cardinals quarterback, won't be involved in the Rosen sweepstakes. The Giants' NFC East rival believes that they could land Haskins at No. 15 as well, per Rusini.

The report hints that the Giants could be coming away with Rosen, allowing them to focus on defense and the offensive line in the first round rather than Gettleman spending a high pick on a passer.
